How to support your child at home

Reading Books

Books

These are for you to share at home with your child. Please read and discuss the picture with your child. You can also discuss the characters, plot and setting with your child. Get your child to retell the story in their own words. This book can be read as many times as you like during the week. The more times you read it the better!

Read, Write, Inc Reading Books

- Once your child is confidently accessing our daily phonics sessions, retaining letter sounds and beginning to blend the letter sounds together, they will bring home reading books to read themselves. Again, these need to be read as many times as you can that week.

Phonics

- We will be sending home flash cards and letter formation and some website links to support your child with their phonics learning.

Other ways to support your child at home

- The most important thing we ask you to do is to have conversations with your child to continue to develop their communication and language skills.
- Play with your child, eat dinner together, sing nursery rhymes, read bedtime stories, go to the library and spend time outside exploring the world around them.
